Art Greenfield

“You don’t know about me unless you have read a novel by me called Three Eyed Man (and very few people have),” says Arthur Greenfield. “In the flyleaf of the novel is a biographical sketch describing me as a 1973 graduate of Kansas University School of Social Welfare, long-term married to someone I adore, and who has expressed favorable opinions of me over the many years we have been associated. Together we have bump-stumbled across the globe, and been inspired by many contacts with interesting people and situations. “No biography of me would be anywhere near complete without mentioning my sister-in-law, who inspired me to start writing; or Puck Pilkington, a friend who encouraged me to keep at it.”

Hailing from Newport, Washington, Art has been a member of Spokane Authors and Self-Publishers for a couple of years. He contributed a short story to the organization’s anthology, Celebrating Spokane Authors.
