Linda Sonntag

Linda is a poet and has been a member of Spokane Authors for several years. Her quirky poems bring a little slice of humor into everyday life struggles, and several of them are featured in Celebrating Spokane Authors, the anthology published by the organization in 2017. She recently published a memoir.

Dandelion

Dandelion chronicles the author's life as she battles one trauma after another. From being hit by a car while riding her tricycle, to the death of her older sister, being bullied in grade school, being sexually abused at twelve, and being sent to a boarding school at fifteen. As a result, she often made poor choices regarding relationships and sometimes overused pills and alcohol.

Despite having more than her share of tragedies, she has made some good choices, including her first husband, Vince. He is the father of her three children, and later, very supportive of her. Throughout her turbulent life, with many moves, jobs, and everyday trials and tribulations, the author has a fierce believe in God and believes He had a plan for her that has helped her thrive and survive.
