Marilee (M. J.) Hudon SASP Vice President & Public Relations Person

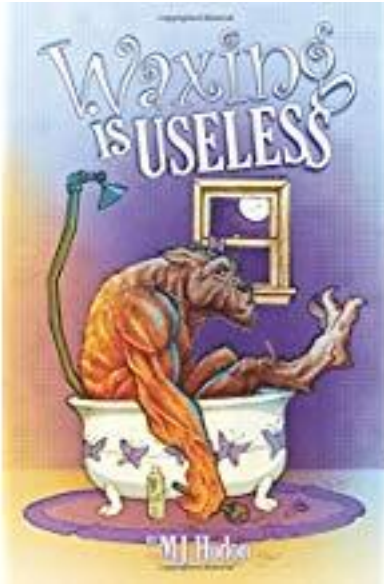

M.J. grew up in the Pacific Northwest enjoying many outdoor activities until auto-immune issues turned her into a pale, indoor dweller dependent on AC. A Christian constantly under construction, she is a voracious reader who enjoys mysteries, comedies, science fiction, and fantasy of all kinds. After being diagnosed with Lupus she facilitated a support group for over 15 years attempting to educate and spread awareness of this difficult disease. It was during this time she decided to write a book highlighting the issues of chronic illness using a humorous format. Currently, M.J. works as a blogger, and a freelance writer at Art Chowder Magazine. In her spare time she enjoys working with multiple writers groups. Her guilty pleasures are shortbread cookies with tea, bad "B" movies, and any kind of monster hunter TV show.

Waxing Is Useless

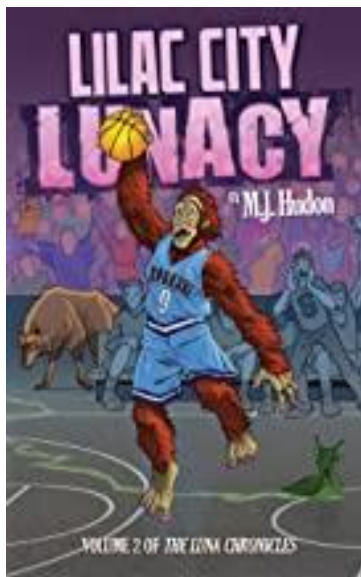

07HY4Y85T (Kindle) 172128186X (pb)

What happens when a middle age soccer mom is faced with adversity? She sprouts fur and a tail, of course! Miranda Moon is confused, and sick and tired of being sick and tired. Strange things are happening and everything seems to be going wrong - with her family, her job, even her health. And what is up with the hair on her legs? With no answers in sight, Miranda prays to God for guidance. That's when her reality shifts. She learns of the existence of the Spokane Guardians, a pack of werewolves protecting her community against other more frightening creatures. Now, after a series of freaky events, she must decide - join them and learn what could be worse than werewolves, or play it safe and cling to her old life? The stress is really getting to her, in fact it's enough to make a girl want to howl!

Lilac City Lunacy

B0BSVB117K (Kindle) B0BSJ6CFV4 (pb)

Miranda Moon and the Spokane Guardians are back!

With her 'Werewolf 101' training nearly complete Miranda has mastered most of the typical Guardian skills. Unfortunately, her Luna abilities are still evolving and more tightly intertwined with her emotional health than anyone (especially her) counted on. After some serious issues hit close to home Miranda's stress has her and two friends stuck midway through their shift, and at the worst time ever. Their usually laid-back hometown of Spokane, WA has suddenly gone nuts!

Fights, false alarms, cell and radio disruptions, and glitching traffic lights have emergency services running wild. Whatever is causing the ruckus, it's up to the pack to put a stop to it. But can they save their hometown while their Sheriff/Alpha is being run ragged and their Luna (plus two) is being tracked by a famous TV cryptid hunter? They have their work cut out for them, especially during this spate of Lilac City lunacy!
