In this riveting crime thriller, a shooter rocks a small-town school and vanishes like the wind. The sheriff calls the FBI for help. New to the profiling unit, Tim McAndrews is assigned to the team sent to the crime scene. When the evidence doesn't fit with a typical school shooter, Tim develops a theory that the unknown subject is an older man with military or law enforcement experience—an assassin, and maybe one of their own. But who would target high school teens for such a fate and why? It's up to Tim and the profiling team to find the shooter's identity despite interference from a brazen news reporter, an attention-seeking politician, and pressure from a powerful supervisory special agent in the FBI. As they pursue the killer, the evidence leads them to a dark and twisted world of illicit drugs and abuse, to an insidious motive for murder, and to villains they never expected.

Tim McAndrews, a top Seattle prosecutor, has his near-perfect case record unjustly tarnished by a self-defense shooting and fears his career as an assistant district attorney is doomed to go nowhere. It's not all bad, though. Legendary FBI Profiler, Elias Cain has offered a job with his team. As he weighs his options for the future, Tim is fortified by the fact that he saved his wife and lover, the beautiful Daniela St. Clair, from death at the hands of a serial killer.

Tim takes a much-needed ski vacation with his wife and best friends to Schweitzer Mountain Ski Resort. When a young girl is abducted in front of the resort, Tim is drawn into the intrigue. This girl isn't the only child in danger. Once the police finish their investigation, he will be assigned the prosecution's case where two six-year-old twin boys were abducted and murdered. Rainbow-colored duct tape Tim finds in the snow may be the one clue that ties these kidnappings together.

Tim's vacation is put on hold when his friend, Elias Cain, negotiates with the Seattle DA to loan Tim to his profiling team for the kidnapping investigation. As their research unfolds, Tim and his friends realize they are chasing a child trafficking ring that's like an octopus with tentacles reaching everywhere. To take down this monster, Tim must put his life on the line.

On a summer morning, nine-year-old Jamie Randall leaves his family's motorhome. His parents are fighting. Again. Wandering up a hiking trail, he stops to play and collect crawfish in a creek feeding the Tenville River. He notices two people dumping trash down the creek's embankment. But it's not trash-it's a body. Jamie drops the crawfish and runs.

Hours later, when Jamie fails to return to camp for lunch, his frantic mother calls the police. The Sheriff, fearing the worst, contacts the FBI.

Special Agents Tim McAndrews, Miguel Gonzales and their team are assigned to the case. During the search, McAndrews finds a woman's body wrapped in a tarp beside the creek. Now, they have a homicide complicating the search for the lost boy.

McAndrews believes Jamie witnessed the body dump and is in extreme danger.

Adding urgency to finding Jamie, the National Weather Service issues an evacuation order for the river canyon as a massive thunderstorm threatens to inundate the river.

McAndrews and Gonzales refuse to leave the search. If Jamie's still alive, they can't abandon the boy in the storm-alone and afraid.

McAndrews and his team must find the boy before the killers do and the storm breaks.
